Updated

(Supplementary Principle 2-4① Ensuring Diversity)

The Company and its subsidiaries (the Company group, the group) sees itself as an “Instrument Craftsman” delivering “meaningful experiences for people”, empower individuals to liberate themselves, live authentically, and engage in co-create with customers and communities through their best-ever performance. It places great importance on creating such an environment. Rather than focusing on the collective, the Company group engages with each individual, respecting their unique thoughts and passions, and strives to implement the most tailored human resource initiatives possible.

1. Governance

The governance structure related to human capital is led by the President and CEO, who serves as the chairperson, and is composed of the HR Core Team. This team includes HR heads from each region and HR business partners responsible for key business divisions (comprising two Japanese members, one American, one Chinese, and one German). They discuss and implement major HR initiatives across the entire group. Significant organizational restructurings, personnel transfers, and the introduction or revision of key HR policies are properly reported to the Board of Directors, and executed under their supervision and with their guidance. Valuing diversity is one of the most important and fundamental policies. While respecting the cultures of each region, the group implements initiatives that support the growth of each individual by closely aligning with their unique needs.

2.Strategy

a. Appointment of talent regardless of personal attributes such as gender, nationality, or age.

The Company group has approximately 1,000 team members working around the world, about half of whom are employed locally at its group companies outside Japan, working under local leadership, and leveraging the unique cultures and business characteristics of each country.

For key management positions, the Company group prioritizes passion and capability to fulfill the mission above personal attributes such as gender, nationality, or age, and appoints individuals based on their merit and commitment. In each major business domain, the Company group designates executive leaders who are responsible for operations. Among the nine executive leaders, two are non-Japanese nationals (including one woman) and one is a Japanese woman. This structure enables the Company group to incorporate diverse perspectives and deliver the “inking experience” as a new form of value to various communities. As of the fiscal year ended March 2025, the rate of female team members in managerial positions was 22.9%.

b. Freedom from time and location constraints.

Within the Company group, not only in Japan but across all regions, we have established a system that allows employees to freely choose their place of work, within the bounds of each country’s labor laws. Commuting to the office is not mandatory and is left to individual discretion. Similarly, working hours are based on a flexible schedule. In Japan, we have adopted a super-flex system with no core hours, allowing employees to freely determine their start and end times based on personal discretion and work requirements. In many regions, similar working styles have been implemented to the extent permitted by local labor laws. By removing the constraints of time and location, the Company has created an environment that supports working styles tailored to individual lifestyles, fostering a culture where free and creative thinking can flourish.

c. Living better- Implementation of Health and Productivity Management

As mentioned above, many team members of the Company group are actively utilizing systems such as super-flex and shortened working hours to balance family responsibilities and work, enabling them to return to their roles without taking a career break. In Japan, the male childcare leave acquisition rate of the Company for the fiscal year ended March 2025 was 42.9%. In addition, many male team members participate in childcare before and after childbirth by using paid leave. As for the female team members, the return-to-work rate after maternity and childcare leave was 100% in the same fiscal year. Upon returning to work, Human Resources and the relevant department heads conduct interviews with returning members to understand their situations and support a smooth and manageable reintegration plan. Furthermore, by utilizing the flexibility in choosing work locations, there are team members not only in Japan but also in other countries who have returned to their hometowns to care for elderly parents while continuing to work. The Company group places great importance on creating an environment where team members can continue working as much as possible, developing systems and fostering a culture of understanding and support.

In addition, in Japan, the Company group also places a strong emphasis on health and productivity management, offers bi-monthly health consultations with an occupational physician, has introduced a health consultation app, and shares the results of annual stress checks with management to ensure the ongoing well-being of its team members.

d. Learning through Practice - Human Capital Development Strategy

The Company group values real experience and learning through trial and error and actively assigns passionate and talented individuals to key projects. Their accumulated expertise becomes a core asset that drives our business forward.

(1) The Company group appoints team members as leader of the product planning team called the "Extended Core (ETC)" teams based on passion and a certain level of experience at Wacom, regardless of age or current position, even if they have no prior experience in product planning. Those selected are entrusted with authority and assigned to lead product development initiatives.

(2) The Company group forms "Task Force Teams (TFT)" to address urgent and critical issues. Even recent graduates, including Generation Z members, are appointed as core members of these teams.

(3) The Company group values living and learning together with the communities. Its team members actively participate in the "Connected Ink" event, where they present project outcomes on stage alongside customers and partner companies, or co-host booths with customers. These experiences provide valuable opportunities to engage directly with its business and communities, fostering significant personal and professional growth. In addition, recognizing that every member has connections to communities outside the group, we support initiatives that embody one of Wacom Chapter 4 strategic directions: "Living with Communities." This includes encouraging activities beyond the workplace, such as community engagement, side jobs, and dual employment, as part of its broader commitment to supporting diverse and meaningful ways of working.

Furthermore, the Company group respects each individual's motivation for self-directed learning and has introduced a group-wide e-learning platform that allows immediate access to learning opportunities whenever needed. This platform is accessible to all team members of the Company group, regardless of their country or employment status.

(4) Risk Management

As an instrument craftsman pursuing the ultimate "Inking (Kaku)" experience, value foundation of the Company group is firmly supported by advanced technological capabilities. The Company group believes that nurturing and securing engineers who drive technological innovation is of utmost importance, and it is deeply committed to talent development. However, the training process can be time-consuming, and securing and retaining top talent carries the potential risk of rising personnel costs in the future. To address this, President and CEO of the Company group actively engages in dialogue with key members of the technology division, creating frequent communication opportunities to deepen their understanding of its values and strategic direction. In addition, the Company group continuously reviews compensation levels to support the ongoing development and retention of talent.

Furthermore, the Company group conducts annual refresher training on its Code of Ethics Business Conduct, providing all team members with an opportunity to reaffirm their understanding of workplace ethics. Over 90% of team members across the group complete this training each year. In the event of any issues, the Company group has established a group-wide risk hotline system that allows for swift and anonymous reporting, ensuring flexible and prompt responses. The Company group also strives to create an office environment where every team member can engage directly with the President and CEO. Key topics of discussion have included business performance trends, the content and progress of business structure reforms, market trends and growth potential of businesses of the Company, and shareholder return policies. Based on these constructive dialogues, the Company has enhanced its disclosures regarding the progress of structural reforms, business strategies and plans under the Medium-Term Management Plan "Wacom Chapter 4," estimated capital cost, and capital policies.

In the fiscal year ended March 2025, the Company held two financial results briefings, in addition to over 180 individual meetings and small-group sessions (including guided tours of its latest technologies) with domestic and overseas institutional investors and analysts.

In terms of business growth, the Company has set targets of ¥150 billion in revenue and ¥15 billion in operating profit. As indicators of capital efficiency, the Company estimates its cost of equity capital to be approximately 8% to 10%, based on CAPM estimates and market expectations (such as equity earnings yield levels). Against this benchmark, the Company has set goals of achieving a return on equity (ROE) of over 20% and a return on invested capital (ROIC) of over 18%. Regarding capital policy, the Company has also disclosed its cash allocation plan for the operating cash flow generated during the “Wacom Chapter 4” period. This includes future-oriented investments (R&D, capital expenditures, and technology partnerships) as well as enhanced shareholder returns, such as the introduction of a progressive dividend policy and a total shareholder return ratio of 50% or more.
