Announcement Regarding Establishment of Sponsored ADR (American Depositary Receipt) Program

Tokyo Electron Limited (TEL) hereby announces that it has established a sponsored Level I American Depositary Receipt ("ADR") program in the United States, with JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. acting as the depositary bank. Trading of TEL's ADRs is expected to commence in the United States on September 17, 2026 (U.S. Eastern Time). This sponsored ADR program will not involve any capital raising through a U.S. listing, issuance of new shares, or any other financing activities. Consequently, the total number of outstanding shares of TEL will not increase, and there will be no dilution of shareholder value.

1. Purpose of Establishing this Sponsored ADR Program
   This sponsored ADR program is intended to broaden TEL's investor base and attract new investors by providing U.S. investors with greater access to TEL shares and expanding the range of investment options available in the U.S. capital markets. TEL also expects the program to enhance its visibility and market presence in the United States, thereby strengthening engagement with the global investment community.

1. About ADRs
   American Depositary Receipts (ADRs) are negotiable securities issued by a U.S. depositary bank representing ownership interests in the underlying shares of a non-U.S. company. ADRs enable investors to trade, settle, and hold shares of non-U.S. companies in the same manner as U.S. securities within the United States.

2. About Sponsored ADRs

Sponsored ADRs are issued by a designated depositary bank pursuant to a deposit agreement with the issuer of the underlying shares. Such agreements define the rights and obligations of the issuer, the depositary bank, and ADR holders. Sponsored ADR programs are generally classified into three categories: Level I, Level II, and Level III, depending on whether they are listed and/or involve a public offering. The level of disclosure required by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) varies accordingly.

- Level I ADR programs are unlisted programs traded in the over-the-counter market.
- Level II ADR programs are listed on a U.S. securities exchange such as the New York Stock Exchange.
- Level III ADR programs are listed programs involving capital raising through the issuance of new shares.

3. Transition from Unsponsored ADRs

TEL's ADRs that have previously traded in the U.S. securities markets as unsponsored ADRs without TEL's involvement are expected to transition to the sponsored ADR program established by TEL.

This announcement is not intended as an offer to sell or a solicitation of an offer to purchase securities.
